Overview

What is a battery energy storage system (BESS) & an uninterruptible power supply (UPS)?

Figure 1: A simplified project single line showing both a battery energy storage system (BESS) and an uninterruptible power supply (UPS). The UPS only feeds critical loads, never losing power.

What is uninterruptible power supply (UPS) system?

Uninterruptible power supply (UPS) system is a special case of BESS application which is being used in industries for providing continuous supply to critical loads. However, UPS system requires two individual AC/DC (rectifier/charger) and DC/AC (inverter) power conversion systems. Description of BTM BESS applications.

What is the difference between Bess and ups?

UPS is focused on providing immediate, short-term power backup during interruptions, ensuring continuous operation of critical systems for a limited duration. BESS is designed for long-term energy storage and management, supporting renewable energy integration and providing power over extended periods.

What type of battery does a Bess system use?

BESS systems can use a variety of battery types with relative advantages and disadvantages that are worth considering. For example, Lithium Iron Phosphate (LFP) batteries offer longer term deep cycle durability than Lithium polymer (LiPo) and they are resistant to dendrite growth so they pose no fire risk.

How does Bess work?

BESS operates by storing electrical energy in rechargeable reserves, which can later be discharged to power local or grid-scale demand. Perhaps most importantly, these battery-held reserves are ready to switch into grid supply quickly, as demand or frequency/voltage instability trigger them automatically.

Does BTM Bess discharge real power to the grid?

It is necessary to ensure that BTM BESS is not discharging real power to the grid. To meet this requirement, BESS system shall continually monitor the facility load and adjust the BESS discharge not to exceed the facility consumption.
