What is the telecommunications system like in Eritrea?

Eritrea's telecommunications system is old and inadequate. In 2000 there were only 23,578 telephone lines in the entire country. The Eritrean government has installed a digital system to improve and expand the service. There is 1 Internet service provider and a growing number of e-mail stations.

How much electricity does Eritrea use?

Eritrea's 2 major ports, Massawa and Assab, require upgrading. Energy production is limited in Eritrea. According to 1997 estimates, the country generates and consumes 177.6 million kilowatt hours (kWh) of electricity, powered by fossil fuel, and many parts of the country, particularly the rural areas, lack electricity.

How many telephone lines are there in Eritrea?
